

Reynolds invited to speak at joint NIH-NRI workshop

Lawrence Reynolds, co-director of the Center for Nutrition and Pregnancy (CNP), has been invited to speak at the upcoming joint workshop of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Research Institute (NRI) and the National Institutes of Health (NIH).

The workshop is scheduled for April 19-20, at the National Library of Medicine on the NIH campus, Bethesda, Md. Reynolds will present information from his research in a session titled, "Developmental Programming of Adult Disease: Understanding the Impact on Human Health and Animal Production."

Reynolds' research has received substantial funding from the NRI, the NIH and the National Science Foundation. He has served on more than 20 grant review panels for the NIH and NRI, chairing three of them. Reynolds has been co-director of the CNP since its inception in 2002.
